REDBIRD'S BRITTNEY MICULKA JOINS WOMEN IN AVIATION BOARD

Austin, TX (March 2, 2017) – At today's annual membership meeting, Brittney Miculka, Director of Marketing for Redbird Flight Simulations has been elected to the Board of Directors for Women in Aviation, Intl (WAI), a nonprofit organization that encourages the advancement of women in all aviation career fields and interests. Ms. Miculka was the only new member voted to the Board and will serve a three-year term.

"We are pleased for Brittney to be involved with this great organization," said Redbird President and COO, Charlie Gregoire, "her passion for general aviation and years of experience promoting and strengthening the flight training community will certainly be an asset for Women in Aviation and its members."

Ms. Miculka has been with Redbird for two years, creating tools and resources that support flight schools and organizing many of the company's marketing efforts. She also manages the yearly professional flight training conference, Redbird Migration. Recently, Brittney served as the host of Redbird's online series called Winging It (www.WingingIt.show). This special project sent her on the road to visit flight schools across the country to highlight the best in aviation education and promote pilot proficiency. Prior to her time at Redbird, Brittney spent 8 years with the Aircraft Owners and Pilots Association. Brittney is a certificated flight instructor and holds commercial airplane single and multiengine ratings.

"I am incredibly proud to join this group of talented board members and I look forward to offering my support and knowledge to guide the next phase of success for this impactful organization," said Miculka.
